VC has been coming to the Wah Hong group for many years and it was a regular weekly session at the Unity Centre.

During the pandemic the weekly group had to stop. VC was able to continue with the allotment project as it was relatively covid safe. However, she felt cut off socially from the other members of the group.

Since the restrictions have been lifted, he is really pleased that the group is up and running again. He is now able to see everyone, rather than just the odd one or two people who were helping with the allotment. “It is really good to meet again and share lunch together, the food is so good”. “We have some new members of the group and some are from Hong Kong where I am from. It is lovely to be part of a lively chatty group again.”

“I am hoping the new members will help on the allotment during the growing season this year!”
